

PORT ARTHUR FACING DEATH

Japanese Vigilance Prevents Blockade Runners
From Supplying Provisions for People.

CAPTURE FOOD LADEN JUNKS DAILY

Many Have Died From Bites of the Large Flees That Infest the City--Town Is In Complete
Ruins--Awful Death Rate.

[Special by Scripps-Mellae.]
Chefoo, Sept. 22.—Chinese who have arrived here from Port Arthur say deaths from starvation are increasing in number. Food is supplied to foreigners who are about to leave the place in order to deceive outsiders as to the actual conditions prevailing at the fortress.

It is stated that the Japanese have captured numbers of junks attempting to run the blockade. These vessels were mostly laden with meat, flour and eggs.

Europeans arriving here from Port Arthur tell gruesome stories of conditions in the besieged stronghold. It is asserted that there are no contagious diseases, but that many deaths have been caused by the bites of large flees which feed upon the putrefying corpses outside. The old town is almost wrecked.

Russian Merchant Escapes.

A Russian merchant named Kratz, who has arrived at Chefoo, states he was captured while attempting to get through the blockading line. He was taken blindfolded on board a Japanese warship, where he was interrogated and threatened with being sent as a prisoner to Japan. He finally was liberated, however. The officer who had examined him congratulated him on his lucky escape from Port Arthur, saying a severe bombardment was to begin on Tuesday (Sept. 20), preparatory to storming important positions. The officer added that the fortress would not be captured in a few days. Stossel Alert as Ever.

Kratz became enthusiastic when he described Gen. Stossel's alertness and diligence. He never seems to sleep. Each day after his administrative work is finished he prowls about the forts. He is a severe taskmaster for the officers, insisting upon a strict performance of their duties. He has closed the officers' clubs. The soldiers idolize him and he inspires confidence.

Kratz says Port Arthur in the daytime is deserted. At night it is like a black vault. There is almost no sound heard except the distant cracks of the skirmishers' rifles or an occasional gun. The air is filled with the scent of death. No noncombatants venture out after sunset. There was general disgust at Port Arthur when the Russian squadron returned after its engagement with the Japanese on Aug. 10. Admiral Prince Outskovsky, who brought the squadron back, is in the hospital.

The Japanese guns are cleverly masked. Their howitzers, using smokeless powder, are the most effective. The Russians have formed a corps of sharpshooters whose duty it is to creep out on the hillsides and discover the positions of the enemy's guns. Frequently they have been successful in this work.

M. Kratz refused to talk about the food supply, only saying jocularly: "Well, they have no plum pudding."

RUSSIAN GENERAL TELLS OF THE JAPANESE ATTACK

Reports Given of the Fierce Fighting in the Neighborhood of Mukden Yesterday and Today.

[Special by Scripps-Mellae.]
St. Petersburg, Sept. 22.—General Kuropatkin reports under yesterday's date: "Small detachments of the enemy have moved from the Ben in Puzhu toward the Rao Youlin in order to penetrate north of Daling Pass. Indications are the enemy is trying to flank our left. Our losses at Daling Pass on Monday were one officer and three men killed, and ten officers and forty-five men wounded. A dispatch from Mukden says a battle is expected hourly in the vicinity of Fushun, thirty miles east of Mukden. A Rome telegram from Toki in says Field Marshal Oyama addressed a proclamation to the army urging a supreme effort in the forthcoming battle, which he says is liable to decide the campaign.

JEFFRIS TALKS ON THE POSSIBLE OUTCOME NOW

In His Opinion the Supreme Court Can Not Decide the La Follette Ticket Regular.

M. G. Jeffris returned from Hudson this morning where he spoke last evening. He reports that the vast army at that city was packed to the doors with an enthusiastic and interested audience. Three hundred more chairs were in the hall for his meeting than for that of the governor the night before. Mr. Jeffris left this afternoon for St. Louis where he will be engaged for several days but will return to Wisconsin Monday and continue his campaign throughout the state. On being questioned as to the political situation Mr. Jeffris said: "I believe that under the law of the supreme court is bound to find in our favor. But of course no one knows what the result of the action will be until the decision is announced. There is not the slightest danger of their declaring the La Follette ticket regular and ours irregular. I am satisfied the decision will be in our favor or the court will decline to decide the matter on the grounds it has no jurisdiction in the matter of politics and it will be for the party to settle itself. If this is the result then we will be in the position of having the decision in our favor of the highest tribunal, that of the national convention of the republican party. The La Folletteites repudiate the decision of the national convention and their campaign in the state and their pleadings in the court have been attacks upon our credentials and the committee on credentials and the convention itself which nominated Roosevelt. They pretend to support Roosevelt, but their every proceeding and line of argument and political action is against the national ticket. Their press is filled with attacks upon the leading republicans of the country. They are not republicans. Their doctrine is a sort of a mixture of socialism, Bryanism and populism, making a compound well named as La Folletteism. This means that the republican party of Wisconsin to be in line with the principles of the national party which stands for the empowerment of industries, the prosperity of the nation, the protection under the law to labor and capital alike, we must stamp out La Folletteism in the state of Wisconsin. The only way to do this is to keep up the present fight until we win. The fight will be kept up. No man in the history of the world has ever succeeded when he arraigned himself against the thinking people against the best interests of the people and the material interests of his country. Many a man by appealing to the lower prejudices has had a temporary success but after awhile he has lost his grip and has been trampled into the dust by the very horde he has been misleading. La Follette's actions are so different from his words that his insincerity is becoming manifest to everyone. He has a lust for power. He has no regard for the methods he uses to attain his ends. He has already done the state a great injury; we propose to stop his further injury to the state as quickly as possible. This means that the fight goes on."

Another very sad case of the old story of "Devil when sick a monk would be."

COACH STRUCK DYNAMITE BOX

Package Dropped on Tracks From Rear End of a Wagon Hurrying Across.

MOTORMAN WAS BLOWN TO ATOMS

Cap Number Was the Only Means of Identification--
Many Passengers Badly Injured--The Front
Portion of Car Blown in Every Direction.

[Special by Scripps-Mellae.]
Melrose, Mass., Sept. 22.—Six persons were instantly killed, four others died within a few moments and twenty are known to be injured, several of them, it is believed, fatally, by an outward bound Boston & Northern trolley car striking a fifty-pound box of dynamite on the tracks near the corner of Main and Wyoming streets in this city at 8 o'clock Wednesday night.

The box had been lost off an express wagon driven by Roy Fenton, the driver not discovering the loss until he had gone fully a quarter of a mile beyond. He started back to look for the missing freight and was within 100 yards of it when the explosion occurred. Fenton was placed under arrest.

Dead and Injured.

The following dead have been identified:
Dr. Malcolm F. McLennan, Melrose Highlands.
E. B. Haynes, Melrose.
Winfield Rowe, Saugus, Mass., motorman.

E. A. Stowe, South Boston.
Fred D. Marshall, Boston.
The unidentified dead are three women, a 3-year-old girl, and a man.

Those most seriously injured and who may die are:
Edward A. Waterhouse of Melrose, foot amputated and otherwise badly injured.

Dr. Perry of Wakefield, both legs broken.
Mrs. John Conway of Melrose, both legs broken.

George H. Andrews of Melrose, a compound fracture of the left leg and foot amputated.

Motorman Is Blown to Pieces.
The Boston & Northern cars are among the heaviest type of trolley cars and running through the suburbs of Boston sometimes attain a speed of forty miles an hour. The car struck the box while going fully twenty miles an hour and the explosion was terrific.

The front portion of the car was blown in every direction, the dashboard being found over fifty yards from the wreck. Every window within 200 yards of the wreck was broken and two men standing on the curb fifty feet away were badly injured by the explosion.

Motorman Winfield Rowe was literally blown to pieces, his cap number being the only sure source of identification.

The car carried about forty passengers, mostly workmen returning to their homes in this city. One woman and her baby were found among the dead.

Grotesque Scene.

It is shown that the force of the explosion, was upward, as ten feet of the rear part of the car is intact, while the conductors and two passengers who stood on the rear platform were hardly moved by the shock.

The immediate vicinity to the accident presented a fearful spectacle when those in the neighborhood reached the scene. The ground was strewn with legs, arms and other portions of the bodies of those who had been killed, while shrieks and groans came from the writhing forms of the injured.

Within a few minutes a great crowd had collected and the injured were cared for until the physicians, not only from Melrose, but from Medford, Everett and Malden, reached the scene.

Confusion Reigns.
For more than three hours there was the greatest confusion and it was difficult to obtain the names of any of the dead or injured or to ascertain the cause of the accident.

Thousands of people rushed about trying to find relatives and friends, and the hospitals were besieged.

The force of the explosion was terrific and the report was heard many miles. Directly opposite the scene was the Masonic building, every window of which was shattered, and through one of the windows a human foot was blown. A score of persons within a hundred yards of the car were knocked down and rendered deaf by the concussion.

SHERMAN BOOTH'S TRIAL RECALLED

DID MUCH TO AUGMENT CIVIL WAR SENTIMENT.

EDITOR OF FREE DEMOCRAT

Accounts of Clash of State and United States Courts in Gazette of 1854.

"There died a few days ago a man of whom it might be said, without gross exaggeration, that he was the cause of the civil war," said an old Grand Army man in commenting upon the death of Sherman M. Booth. "It is needless to say that behind it all was the irrepressible conflict," but the only overt acts that the south can muster in support of its charges against the north were those in resistance to the enforcement of the fugitive slave law. And the most flagrant and sensational of these was the event in which Booth was the central figure. This could be plausibly cited as demonstrating the deliberate purpose of the northern state, with the sanction of its courts, to nullify the act of 1850.

The underground railroad had a number of stations in southeastern Wisconsin where runaway slaves were harbored until they could be put aboard vessels on Lake Michigan that would land them in Canada. At one of these near Racine, Joshua Glover found refuge after escaping from his master in Missouri. He was betrayed by one of his own race, a miscreant named Turner, and a warrant was procured from the United States District Judge and placed in the hands of Deputy United States Marshal Cotton with a posse of six men went to the house where Glover was playing cards with Turner and another colored man. The officer demanded admittance, and Turner and another colored man immediately unbolted the door. Glover was knocked down with a hudgeon and treated with the utmost cruelty before he was manacled, put in a wagon and driven off.

"When the citizens of Racine heard of the proceedings they were stirred to wild excitement. A mass meeting was held and resolutions adopted demanding that the alleged fugitive slave have a fair trial. It was learned that Glover had been taken to Milwaukee and placed in the county jail. A committee of 100 citizens took the first boat for that city, avowedly in furtherance of the resolutions mentioned.

"At this time Sherman M. Booth, who was a graduate of Yale college, was the editor and publisher of the Milwaukee Free Democrat, the organ of the most radical abolitionists. He was a bitter writer, an orator of considerable power, and a born agitator. It was he who was advised by a telegram from the mayor of Racine of the arrest of Glover. Forthwith he issued an extra, which was distributed about the streets of Milwaukee. Then a reporter gained currency that Glover would be freed that afternoon and spirited back to bondage. Booth, who was nothing if not theatrical, mounted a horse and hatless, with his long hair floating in the wind road through the city shouting, 'Freedom to the Rescue! (Nobody had over accounted for the fact, but the abolitionists of that day almost invariably wore their hair reaching to their shoulders.)

"A mass meeting was held in the court house square, which assumed such proportions that the militia was called out, but refused to respond. The excitement was feverish, but temperate counsels prevailed in the end, and it was resolved to have recourse to the expedients of the law. A writ of habeas corpus was served on the sheriff, but he made return that Glover was not in his custody. Then a like writ was on the deputy marshal and the United States district judge announced that it would not be obeyed and a sure relief in advanced stages. The Glover out of jail before the following Monday, when he would have his hearing. But a mob is an uncouthly power.

In the meantime the committee had arrived from Racine, accompanied by the sheriff of the county, who had a warrant for the arrest of Deputy Marshal Cotton and Garland, the owner of Glover, on a charge of assault and battery. Booth called on the crowd to go to supper, but instead they made a rush for the jail, and in fifteen minutes the slave was on his way to Waukesha behind a fast team and considerably ahead of baffled pursuers. Thence he was smuggled to Racine, put on board a boat and delivered safely to Canada.

On the evening of the rescue Garland was arrested by the sheriff of Racine county. Judge Miller issued a writ of habeas corpus and released him on the ground, among others, that he was justified in using any degree of violence, even to the taking of life, to secure possession of his slave. Booth was arrested for violating the fugitive slave law, and upon a hearing before the United States commissioner was bound over to await the action of the grand jury. Bail was promptly forthcoming, but soon after he was surrendered by his bondsmen for the purpose of proceeding by a writ of habeas corpus. "The writ was granted by A. D. Smith, associate judge of the supreme court of Wisconsin, and upon the return and arguments of counsel, Booth was discharged from custody. The decision was based on several grounds, the principal one being that the fugitive slave law was unconstitutional. On an appeal to the full bench the decision was unanimously affirmed: Justice Crawford concurring on a technical point, but dissenting as to the unconstitutionality of the act of 1850. For this he was retired from the bench at the next election.

In the Janesville Gazette of Saturday, July 29, 1854, is found the opinion of the court in brief by Chief Justice C. J. Whitton, and in the Gazette of August 12 of the same year is the opinion of Justice Smith. The former sustains the action of Justice Smith holding that: the power to issue a writ was given a justice of the state court; a writ can be issued in all cases where a citizen of this state is held in custody on the ground of an alleged violation of a law of the U. S. C. and that the fugitive slave act was unconstitutional. In the opinion of Justice Smith the state court was sovereign but that the writ was no bar to the procedure of the case in the United States district courts. Accordingly Booth was tried in the United States district court in January, 1855. Judge Miller charged the jury that the fact alone that the prisoner drafted and presented at the meeting in the courthouse square the following resolutions was sufficient to convict him: "Every person has an indefeasible right to a fair and impartial trial by jury on all questions involving personal liberty."

"The writ of habeas corpus is a great defense of freedom, and that we demand for this prisoner, as well as for our own protection that this sacred writ shall be obeyed."

"That we pledge ourselves to stand by this prisoner and do our utmost to secure him a fair and impartial trial by jury."

After deliberating for seven hours, the jury returned a verdict of guilty. Three of their number presented a declaration to the effect that while they felt bound to perform a most painful duty, they regarded the fugitive slave act as a cruel and odious law, and the acts of the prisoner as noble, benevolent, and humane. A motion for a new trial was promptly denied, and Booth was sentenced to one month's imprisonment and a fine of $1,000 and costs.

Application was made to the supreme court of Wisconsin for a writ of habeas corpus, which was promptly granted. Then the day fixed for the return of the writ the prisoner and his counsel were escorted to the station to take the train for Madison by a band of music and a large crowd of citizens, amid the ringing of bells and the firing of cannon. A few days later the supreme court rendered its decision discharging Booth from the custody of the United States marshal. It also instructed the clerk not to send up the papers on an appeal to the supreme court of the United States, and to disobey a writ of error from that tribunal.

The United States supreme court took cognizance of the case without the records, and its decisions may be found in re U. S. vs. Booth, 18 How. 476, and Ableman vs. Booth, 21 How. 506. It sent down its remittitur requiring the state court to review its action, and to remand Booth to federal custody to serve his sentence. This the supreme court of Wisconsin refused to do, denying that the supreme court of the United States had authority to control its action in the premises.

The young republican party of Wisconsin had adopted the resolutions of 1798 as its platform, had chosen John C. Calhoun as its exemplar, and only differed with Jeff Davis as to the doctrine of state rights in that he was too conservative. One who as a small boy saw some of the events narrated, and now writes of them, shared in the spirit of the time, and did not permit himself to doubt that United States judges, marshals and others had horns and hoofs and a full Mephistophelian equipment.

In March, 1860, Booth was arrested on a warrant issued in pursuance of a conviction in the United States supreme court. And now the state supreme court failed him. Chief Justice Whitton had died and his successor, Luther S. Dixon, held that the fugitive slave act was constitutional. Judge Palmer declined to sit, for the reason that he had been one of Booth's counsel, and the court was equally divided, and two successive applications for a writ of habeas corpus were denied. Booth was confined in the customhouse at Milwaukee. In August a party of eight persons went there at noon, seized the guard, opened the door, and walked off with the prisoner, locking up the guard in his place. One of the party was General O. H. La Grange, subsequently colonel of the First Wisconsin cavalry, the regiment that captured Jeff Davis, and now a prominent citizen of New York. Booth made no attempt to conceal himself or leave the state, and two months later was arrested at Berlin and confined again in the customhouse at Milwaukee. There he remained for some months, occasionally issuing a manifesto which served to keep alive the excitement.

After the election of Lincoln in November, 1860, Senator Doolittle foresaw that it would have an unwholesome effect upon the conditions prevailing at the period if the new president, after his inauguration, should pardon Booth. Accordingly he applied to President Buchanan, and a short time before the expiration of the latter's term he granted a pardon.

CLEVER DODGE OF THE GOVERNOR

Sends Out Blotters to the Faithful To Remind Them of His Work.

Some Janesville business men who are on the political mailing list of the La Follette factional literary bureau in the capitol at Madison have received bunches of little desk blotters printed with quotations from the railroad-baiting speeches of the premier third term. This is a new wrinkle in political campaign advertising. The blotters are handy. They are designed to be distributed freely in banks, business offices and other appropriate places where blotters are used and the users are expected to be inviolate into reading the bit of La Follette gospel, the hope of the literary bureau being that the users will be inoculated with the sentiment thereon presented.

BOWER CITY GENTLEMEN HAVE LANDED SAFELY

Dr. George Fifield and Attorney S. D. Tallman Now Touring Germany.

Last evening a message was received in this city, stating that the steamer Bagravia had been sighted off the coast of Cornwall, England, and expected to reach her dock at Hamburg, Germany, last night. This is the steamer on which Dr. George Fifield and S. D. Tallman sailed from New York a few days ago. After taking in the sights of Germany and Paris they will visit the principal cities of England, Ireland and Scotland.

MAY BE SIGNED WITH THE MILWAUKEE CLUB NEXT YEAR

Manager Joe Cantillon Likes His Work and Will Give Him a Trial.

C. J. McGinley, the veteran umpire of this city, returned home yesterday from a business trip to Milwaukee, where he went to confer with Manager Joe Cantillon of the Milwaukee Baseball club, with a view of signing Pitcher Frank Alken of the local team with the Milwaukee club for next season. Manager Cantillon is much pleased with the record that Alken has established for himself during the past season, and thinks that he will prove a good man in fast company. Pitcher Alken will be given a trial for a place on the team some time this fall.

COUNTY SCHOOLS FOR PAST YEAR

MUCH IMPROVEMENT OVER THE CONDITIONS A YEAR AGO.

MANY SCHOOLS NEED BOOKS

Pay of Teachers is Small, But the Qualifications Are More Closely Looked After.

During the year 1903-4 there were 103 schools maintained in the second superintendent district. Most of them are small. In seven of the ten towns the average daily attendance per school is less than 15. In only one town, the town of Rock, does the average attendance reach 20. Two schools have less than five scholars enrolled, three others less than eleven. Such schools are maintained at a great expense for each scholar, and usually have but little interest in them, with poor teaching and poor results. They would do much better to unite with other districts. The sentiment in favor of consolidation of schools is slowly gaining ground, and this year one—perhaps two—districts will send their children to neighboring schools.

Outside of the cities there were 3,728 children of school age; 2,799 of them attended country and village schools. A number of others were sent to city schools. Of the 1934 children between the ages of 7 and 14 only 1698 attended school 20 weeks or more, as required by law. School boys can do much to get all such children into the schools. Those who grow up ignorant are a menace and an injury to all society. In the three kindergarten are enrolled 82 with an average attendance of about 60.

Below the high schools there were 113 teachers employed, of whom only two were males. There was a little increase in wages in every town, amounting in all to about $5,000. But the wages in most districts were still low, most of the teachers receiving $30 or less per month. The next year will show a further increase as many school boards have been asking for experienced teachers, and were willing to pay them better. Good discipline as well as knowledge and experience are being sought for. Several members of school boards came to the institute to secure teachers.

Nineteen days were given to the regular examinations, 4 for diploma examinations, and 9 last fall for special examinations. This year special examinations will be given only on the last Saturday of each month.

One hundred and six certificates were granted; 29 of which were for a limited time, many of them limited because given at special examinations. As a number wrote twice during the year only about 80 different persons received certificates. Ten were not granted certificates, either because too young or on account of poor work.

Besides the large attendance of 155 at institute this summer, (most of whom worked faithfully), many have been studying at other times, and several were at normal school. The effect of this was seen in the summer examinations where much better average work was done.

Two hundred and fourteen visits were made by the superintendent, usually visiting but two schools each day. Most of the teachers are found trying to do good, faithful work, but so many are inexperienced that they cannot be expected to give the same grade of work that they could do after getting practice in and knowledge of teaching.

Considerable money was spent in improvements to school buildings, especially during the past summer, and some buildings which were among the poorest would not be recognized now. Some other fairly good buildings have been greatly improved. The town of Turtle has led in this work. A number of districts yet ought to follow their good example. Blackboards, furniture, maps, dictionaries, etc., have been added in many schools; in others they are still greatly needed.

The value of good equipment and good books is not fully realized by many. Parents and school boards owe a duty to teachers and scholars in this respect. They should also visit the schools more, and give cordial and earnest support to the teachers.

HUNTING IS FINE IN WHOLE STATE

Some Non Resident Licenses—How Counties Stood as to Numbers Last Fall.

There is every reason to believe that the fish and game warden's office will issue as many hunting licenses as last year, as the present season is the banner small game year, this being especially true with respect to partridges. A non-resident small game license of the season was issued to Mrs. A. H. Sellers of Chicago, who with her husband will hunt in the Badger state. They pay $10 each for the privilege.

Miss Alice W. Dering, also of Chicago, has received a $10 small game license and similar permits have been issued to Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Ladin of Chicago, Miss Jane DePaul and sister, Miss Catherine, of New Albany, Ind., who come with their father, have taken out non-resident deer licenses at $25 each. The young ladies are earnest nimrods, having had small game licenses for three years past. Up-to-date there have been issued 169 non-resident small game licenses at $10 each; 22 non-resident deer licenses at $25 and 90 settlers' licenses, these being issued to people who have made affidavit to the fact that they intend to become permanent residents of the state. Last year the total number of hunting licenses issued to residents was 78,874; 356 were grants to settlers; 362 at $25 each to non-residents, and 308 to non-residents at $10 each.

Vilas county is the banner precinct in the state in proportion to population, taking out the most hunting licenses. Milwaukee county had the largest number, 4,995, and Dane county followed second with 2,732. At the office of the fish and game warden a license was issued last year, making it an easy matter to locate the hunters as their address and personal description is preserved.

WEDDED AT HIGH NOON YESTERDAY

Prof. Fritz Hagens and Miss Katherine Walker of Durand, Ill., Married by Rev. Denison.

Yesterday at 12 o'clock Professor Fritz Hagens, instructor of literature at Harvard university, and Miss Katherine Walker of Durand, Ill., were married by Rev. R. C. Denison at the Congregational parsonage. The couple arrived over the electric line from Beloit at 11:30 and were accompanied by two brothers of the bride and Miss Randall. After the ceremony the newly married couple left for the east where Prof. Hagens will take up his work at Harvard university for the fall term.

'News for the Railroad Men.'

Despite denials from headquarters, the idea that the St. Paul intends to extend its Wisconsin valley branch from Star Lake just over the Wisconsin line, to a connection with its Lake Superior division at Ontonagon is still firmly believed. The valley division is now being extended some fourteen miles, and this fact, coupled with the recent organization of the Ontonagon and Southwestern road, is deemed significant.

W. E. Tyner, a prominent official of the St. Paul road, is one of the directors of the new corporation. A line connecting the Star Lake and Ontonagon, besides tapping the great tracts of timber south and west of Ontonagon, would give the Milwaukee a short line to rich copper country, a lake port at Ontonagon for its Wisconsin valley division. Eventually it is believed, the St. Paul road system will secure control of the copper range road. An offer for purchase has already been informally made.

At the annual meeting of the Soo line the old directors and officers were re-elected. President Thomas Lowry reported the gross earnings of the year showed a decrease of 2.9 per cent while the operating expenses increased 6.6 per cent. In view of the small crop of 1903 and the heavy expenses of the winter following he declared this to be a wonderful showing. A total of 176.36 miles of road was built or acquired.

Nearly every day for the last two weeks the North-western yards have been blocked. Besides the regular shipments of grain at this season there has been a great deal of stock and large numbers of carloads of potatoes pass through lately.

One by one the leviathans of the round-house fountain are being removed from their summer home there and are returning to the river from whence they came last spring. Among those who have already left are Happy and Mike II.

General Railroad Notes

The North-Western road will make extensive improvements on the Iowa Falls division, recently acquired, including new walls and rehabilitating the road. New equipment will be purchased and the road extended from Alden with a connection with the Dakota and Minnesota lines at Eagle Grove.

The Northern-Pacific is planning to put telephones in forty-eight stations on the Idaho, Rocky Mountain, Yellowstone and Dakota divisions. They will be worked on ordinary Morse, telegraph wires.

It is said that the Harriman interests are making strong efforts to retain possession of the Alton road. They have sent out an appeal for proxies to be used at the annual meeting on Oct. 4.

Chicago-St. Louis lines have agreed to add Oct. 6 as a selling day for $9 round trip tickets to the world's fair for Chicago day. It was previously arranged to make this date on Oct. 7 alone.

The report that the Erie has purchased the Pere Marquette-Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton lines is denied by President Russell Harding of the Pere Marquette.

The annual report of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas road, issued yesterday, shows that the gross earnings of the company were $17,766,695, an increase of $668,402.

THE PEOPLE ALL

In Chorus Cried, Give Us Newbro's Herpelide.

This word of late has been in everyone's mouth, and many are wondering what the word signifies, though no one has yet been found, who will deny that NEWBRO'S HERPIDIS does the work. Well, for the information of thousands of people who like to know all about a good thing, "we would say that HERPIDIS means, a destroyer or killer of "Herpes." Now "Herpes" is the family name of a disease caused by various vegetable parasites. A similar microbe causes dandruff, itching scalp, and falling hair; this is the microbe that NEWBRO'S HERPIDIS promptly destroys; after which the hair grows. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpelide Co., Detroit, Mich.

WILL ASSEMBLE IN WASHINGTON

Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., Selects National Capital for Next Meeting.
San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 22.—Washington, D. C., was chosen by the Sovereign Grand Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, as the scene of the next annual session. Washington received 98 votes, against 20 for Buffalo, 18 for Philadelphia, 14 for Cleveland, and 11 for Montreal. The next convention will take place the third Monday in September, 1905. Owing to the fact that the constitution requires that officers be installed before the adjournment of the session, Robert E. Wright, grand sire elect, who is ill at his home at Allentown, Pa., will be installed by Grand Sire C. T. Campbell of London, Ont., at his home.

FARMER TRIES TO END HIS LIFE

Poison Falls to Do Work, but He Says He Will Try Again.

La Porte, Ind., Sept. 22.—Joseph Morris, a wealthy farmer living near Tyner, is lying at the point of death as the result of an attempt to end his life by drinking carbolic acid. Morris declares that if he recovers, which is not probable, he will repeat the act until he succeeds. A sister of Morris committed suicide a year ago by swallowing carbolic acid and this tragedy is believed to furnish the motive for his attempt.

Population of Buenos Ayres.
Buenos Ayres, Sept. 22.—A municipal census has just been taken, and though the exact figures are not yet known, the population of Buenos Ayres is estimated at about 1,000,000. The Argentine capital is now the largest Spanish-speaking capital city in the world.

Wealthy Cotton Factor Dies.
Preston, England, Sept. 22.—Richard Calvert, one of the best-known of the English cotton spinners and manufacturers, died here. He was a member of one of the largest firms in the world, employing several thousand persons.

Cody Drops Divorce Suit.
Denver, Colo., Sept. 22.—Relatives of Col. William F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) gave it out in Denver that he would drop the suit for divorce against his wife on the charge of having attempted to poison him.

Welcomes Death on Gallows.
Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 22.—With every prospect of gaining a commutation to a short term of imprisonment, James Webb, under death sentence for murder, has declared that he wishes to die.

Safe Burglars Escape.
Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 22.—Pursued by citizens and bloodhounds, burglars escaped into the hills of Monroe county, Ohio, after robbing the safe in the postoffice in Woodfield of $1,000.

Steal $1,000 Worth of Pens.
Janville, Wis., Sept. 22.—The plant of the Parker Pen company was looted by thieves, and a thousand dollars' worth of pens and a large sum of money were obtained.

Lightning Explodes Oil Tank.
Port Arthur, Tex., Sept. 22.—Lightning struck an oil tank of the Texas Oil refinery, on which six men were at work, killing five. The oil ignited and an explosion followed.

Admiral Evans to Command.
Washington, Sept. 22.—Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans may be assigned to command the North Atlantic station at the retirement of Rear Admiral Barker in 1905.

Dr. Miles' Nervine
Agree, If It Fails,
To Refund Cost.

Of course we reimburse the druggist. You know him, and trust him.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is medicine for your nerves.

It cures diseases of the internal organs, by giving tone to the nerves which make these organs work.

It is a novel theory—not of anatomy, but of treatment; first discovered by Dr. Miles, and since made use of by many wide-awake physicians, who appreciate its value in treating the sick.

If you are sick, we offer you a way to be made well—Dr. Miles' Nervine.

This medicine is a scientific cure for nerve disorders, such as Neuritis, Headache, Loss of Memory, Sleeplessness, Spasms, Backache, St. Vitus' Dance, Epilepsy or Fits, Nervous Prostration, etc.

By toning up the nerves, Dr. Miles' Nervine will also cure those diseases of the internal organs due to a disordered nervous system.

Some of these are: Indigestion, Bilious Headache, Kidney Trouble, Chronic Constipation, Dropsy, Catarrh, Rheumatism, etc.

"My brother had nervous prostration, and was not expected to live. I hurriedly ordered him to try Dr. Miles' Nervine. He recovered. You remember I told you how it saved my life a few years ago, when I had nervous trouble."

12 PER CENT DIVIDEND PAID TO 2,000 STOCKHOLDERS $12.50 A SHARE NOW. AFTER OCT. 1, 1904, $15.00 A SHARE

THE undersigned company declared another annual dividend of 12%, which was paid on September 15, 1904, to all of its present stockholders. This now makes the third annual dividend in three years and adds to the company's enviable profit-making record for its fortunate stockholders.

DIVIDENDS PAID.

10% paid July 26, 1902, disbursed to 995 stockholders.
10% paid September 21, 1903, disbursed to 1,550 stockholders.
12% paid September 15, 1904, disbursed to 2,000 stockholders.
15% in July, 1905 (estimated).
25% in July, 1906 (estimated).
30% annually thereafter.

THE CAUSES THAT CREATE THESE EXTRAORDINARY PROFITS.

We pay no taxes. We operate under a special franchise. The Government of Mexico by a special contract permits the company to import free of duty all material, machinery and supplies.

We can operate our traffic equipment (steamboats, barges, etc.) every day in the year, due to the favorable climatic conditions of Mexico, while on the Great Lakes navigation is confined to a short season of 200 days.

From 5 to 15% more money is paid this company for freight and passengers than any steamboat company receives for similar service in the United States.

Throughout every other department of our business the same favorable conditions for making profits hold true. The shipbuilding, machinery, sawmills, box factory, furniture plants, etc.

Final Stock Issue.

The last remaining treasury stock is now open for subscription and is being rapidly taken up by the present stockholders and their friends. Before it is all taken up don't you want to look into the proposition? We shall be very glad to have you call upon us and talk the matter over, or if that is not convenient, send us your name and we will promptly mail you the printed matter issued by the company. It's seldom an industrial investment paying such heavy profits can be obtained at any price. It's the final issue of the remaining stock that makes the opportunity now.

Notice of Raise of Price.

On October 1st the price of all stock remaining unsubscribed for in the treasury will be advanced 25 per cent or from $12.50 per share to $15 per share. We wish by this to serve notice upon all having applications for stock on file to call at the office prior to October 1st and take the same up, otherwise they will be declared void.

Withdrawal of Installment Plan.

Until October 1st application for stock will be received at the price of $12.50 per share, either paid for in cash or upon ten equal installments of $1.25 per month for each share subscribed. After October 1st orders for stock will only be filled on the basis of $15 per share—cash with application.

History of the Company.

The entire history of the company, its business, franchises, assets, plants, factory and development, is set forth in a series of booklets and reports to the stockholders, and we ask permission to mail them to you. Your name and address is all that is required.

PRESIDENT DIAZ, of Mexico.

OUR OPERATIONS IN MEXICO.

A person needs only to familiarize himself with the boundless possibilities of Mexico to realize the vast opportunities before this company, which occupies the same position to Mexico that the Hudson Bay Company did in Canada and the United States in the early days of their development, and it is a historical fact that for four hundred years this giant corporation has been creating enormous wealth for its stockholders. Where we operate our business is favored by the climate throughout the year, whereas in Canada it is a constant struggle against the adverse elements. Mexico is either rich in minerals or agricultural wealth. All tropical products grow in profusion. There are no frosts or droughts. The average yield of corn is double that of the United States, and harvested twice a year. No strikes or interferences with the business prosperity of the country, and skilled and unskilled labor can be hired all the time for less than one-fourth what is paid in the United States. Mexican coffee is far superior to the coffee of Brazil and Java, and the United States is enormously increasing its imports of Mexican coffee each year. Our trade with tropical countries, of which Mexico secures the lion's share, according to the statistics of the American Bureau of Republics, now amounts to over $1,000,000 every day. Such favorable environments, linked with the intelligent conduct of the affairs of this company, and special franchises, are the underlying causes explaining why this company in three years has been able to declare 32 per cent in dividends and expects to pay before the expiration of another three years 70 per cent more to its stockholders. Our future profits have been conservatively estimated and based upon the legitimate growth of our business in the past. Our transportation facilities even with our present fleet of steamers is entirely inadequate to meet the demand of the passenger and freight business, and our own shipbuilding plant and dry docks are kept busy building to order our transportation facilities so as to properly take care of our growing passenger and freight trade. Our saw mills, box factories, furniture plants, etc., are busy living off the land. In Chicago we have a large office distributing plant, located at 223 Michigan St., from where our coffee is distributed to all the best hotels in the city, to hundreds of grocers, and shipped throughout the United States.

VERDICT OF THE PARTY
From the report of the committee on Credentials to the REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION, which was unanimously adopted by that convention, June 22d, 1904.

Your committee report it to be their final judgment that the convention which elected said John O. Spooner, J. V. Quarles, J. W. Babcock and Emil Baensch as delegates at large, and their alternates at large, to this convention from the state of Wisconsin WAS THE REGULAR CONVENTION OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY IN WISCONSIN, and that the delegates elected by it are the regular elected delegates at large from the state of Wisconsin to the republican convention, and, as such, are entitled to seats in this convention.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP.
There is a growing sentiment in this county in favor of government and municipal ownership of public utilities. This sentiment is not only endorsed by the socialists, but by many writers on political economy, and by educators as well.

The scheme is as visionary as it is impractical, and it will be a sorry day for America if it is ever adopted. Socialism is a product of the old world, and is one of the out-growths of oppression and tyranny. The doctrine of public ownership is a socialist doctrine, and its advocates are largely represented by men who don't possess a dollar and who contribute nothing but theoretical oratory to the welfare of the nation.

The test of experience, on questions of this character, is always a reliable test. Germany has had the experience, and it is gratifying to quote from so reliable authority as Dr. Robert Schachner, professor of economics at the Heidelberg university.

Prof. Schachner is studying social conditions in this country with a view to using his deductions in his lectures at the university next winter. He was interviewed by the Sentinel the other day in Milwaukee, and this is what he said concerning public ownership.

"It can not be denied that municipal ownership has been a financial failure in Germany as well as in England."

"The trouble seems to lie in the phase of human nature which desires something for nothing; in other words, the public believes that because it owns the utility it should be in a position to enjoy it without paying for its expenses. To gratify this desire the public tariffs are too often placed at less than the net cost and nothing but failure can result."

"Another bad feature in municipal ownership in Germany, is that men are paid according to length of service instead of their ability. This fact alone has proven almost disastrous to public utilities. In some instances the authorities have not hesitated to announce that increased taxation was due to cover the deficit caused by municipal ownership. In other instances the authorities have been slower to make this admission, but the fact nevertheless remains."

"Another just criticism against municipal ownership is that communities are not progressive as individuals or corporations. Because their source of income exists in lessened expenses, corporations are continually experimenting in the application of new methods that may perhaps cut down the cost of production without deteriorating the service. Communities where every man feels as if he should share in the benefits are slow to adopt methods that may perhaps call for decreased manual labor, since it would throw some out of employment who feel that the community should take care of them."

People Not Prepared Far It

"In America I would find that private ownership of public utilities the proper thing. It is a democratic institution. Community ownership smacks much of nepotism, if I may use this term to designate the relation the individual places in the state for his support. It is really a phrase—one of the good phrases—of socialism. Eventually it will come in this country, but as yet the people are not prepared for it. It means to them an interference in their private and individual rights."

"I find your workmen are better paid than those of England, who again are better paid than those in our own country. This accounts for the better housing and living which your workmen demand and receive to the benefit of the country at large. Socialism under such conditions can not gain a permanent foothold in America as it is doing in Germany. Dissatisfaction should, not exist here, where conditions are so near perfect as any one could wish for in comparison with conditions in other countries. Against your unions I have the same criticism to make that I have made against employment of men on public enterprises at a uniform wage scale instead of at one graduated according to the volume of production. So long as there is a demand for labor in America I do not think you will effect a change in this particular."

The weaknesses of the system are clearly pointed out by the professor, and he is in a position to treat the subject intelligently. "Something for nothing is the growing ambition of the age. People who pay no taxes and who are free from responsibility are inclined to be envious of those who carry the burdens. The spirit of envy results in restlessness and they soon become fit subjects for any ad or the cry that may be suggested."

What the professor says regarding wage and labor conditions in the country, as compared to either Germany or England is well worth considering. The American workman is the prince of all workmen. When the fact is recognized and more fully appreciated contentment will reign supreme.

SHOULD A LAWYER ADVERTISE?
Attorney Joseph Loeb of Chicago was interviewed by the Daily News, on the question of professional advertising. Mr. Loeb is evidently not troubled with that great bugbear "professional ethics," and he offers the following sensible suggestions which could be profitably adopted by physicians as well as lawyers.

Many a professional man is living on ethics, when he might be surviving on beef-steak and riding in an automobile. If he would abandon ethics and adopt business sense, Mr. Loeb says:

"Advertising is simply making known, and in our modern commercial sense, making goods or services so favorably known that people will buy them."

"In our highly specialized industrial state it is essential that whoever has a particular kind of goods or a special service shall let the fact be known freely. This promotes the social welfare in that it conduces to the largest measure of satisfaction for our civilized necessities. Since no man can go abroad and personally seek out those ready for his services, nor reach them all in person, he sensibly employs that engine of publicity, the public prints, that all who run may read and reading come to buy. Now, how is it with the lawyer? He has services to render and there are those untrained in the law and troubled by business or private affairs who desire expert advice. This large public must be brought to know where it can obtain the special service, the peculiar skill it so assuredly desires. In a small town that an attorney flaunts his sign to the breeze, is advertisement enough. In the course of every day most men and many women pass and read that symbol. So compact is the social life in such places that merely being and breathing there is advertisement enough not alone of professional abilities but of every one of the minutest of private affairs. Here, on the one hand, a lawyer can not reach his public unless he most strenuously enlarges his shingle against the sky or multiply it so that the million may know of its whereabouts."

"These reasons for advertisement are essentially strong in the case of a young man and comparatively unknown man. He desires all the public to know where he is. If he have any special worth to the public it is to the public's advantage to know of him. Usually his very youth and energy and ambition are elements of such special worth. Besides, if he have any particular skill, let him show them to the public in search of these qualities. How better illuminate his own capacities than by fair and ingenious advertisement? But a young man with some degree of fastidiousness and some feeling for the pulse of economic activity will make his opinion and his labor especially worth while along a certain given line. Then, for the public's advantage and his own, he must advertise his intellectual wares. There is no more dignity in practicing law honorably than in honorably selling shoes or shirts or cabbages. And no less dignity. There is no viler thing than a dishonest merchant unless it be a dishonest lawyer betraying a trust. If then, a man be without the grace of honor, he should not be permitted to practice law—nor yet to sell cabbages."

"To advertise is to make public promise, and to make public promise is to assume public responsibility. Many lawyers have heard their last of responsibility when they write the last words of their bar examinations and take their oaths. After that silence and the night. A man who advertises and forgets the terms of his proposals dies the professional death. But he who lives by the given word is the chosen of public respect and public honor. By all means let the lawyer advertise—for the good of the speaking public, for the welfare of the despoiled people, for the betterment of his own position and for the ennobling of his profession."

WHAT IS A REBATE
Governor La Follette openly charged the elevator company, in which Senator Moshier is interested, with receiving rebates from the railroads amounting to $92,000. The charge is absolutely without foundation. The elevator company is a milling company, and it receives the same commodity rate as all other milling companies. This is not a rebate, and no one is better aware of this fact than the governor.

A rebate can only exist where full charges are collected, and a portion of the money returned. A commodity rate is a rate given millers, lumbermen, paper mill men and manufacturers, which enables them to compete fairly with each other as well as with competitors from other states.

It is the one thing which encourages Wisconsin industries, and it has done more to develop the state, than all other influences combined. The manufacturers are opposing the governor as a unit because it is a matter of life and death with them.

If he should succeed in establishing his theories of a rate commission appointed by himself to do his bidding, commodity rates would be abolished, and when this is accomplished Mr. Moshier, Mr. Blodgett and every other miller in the state would be driven out of business in less than thirty days.

Other lines would be affected and the industries of the state would be paralyzed beyond redemption. This is the proposition with which the state is confronted, and men can afford to think twice and then think again before they vote in November.

Two prominent Milwaukee republicans attempted to reply to the governor through the columns of Collier's magazine. Their manuscript was returned with the statement that they were too light weight to meet the governor. That was very considerate to say the least.

The editor of "Collier's," like the editor of "Harper's," is a very wise man. These two gentlemen have appointed themselves dictators to the president, and what they don't know about managing the government, would fill a very small book.

Rock County is a loyal republican county and its 8,000 republican votes will be cast for Roosevelt, and every republican on the ticket next November.

Factional strife is confined to the state, and the party vote will not be influenced by it on national issues.

The people who think they want a primary law will change their opinion when they digest the proposed innovation.

Senator Spooner owes it to himself, as well as the party, to answer the attack made on him by Steffens in McClure's magazine. If this is a campaign of education, the people are entitled to both sides of the question.

Mr. Bryan is a negative supporter of democracy this year. He damns the party with faint praise, and clings to his hobbies with old-time tenacity.

How to Gain Riches.
Otto Wicke, a prominent New York politician, whose check is worth $125,000, at one time lived on five cents a day and slept in the city hall park.

Malta's Chief Industry.
Lacemaking gives employment to about two-fifths of the population of Malta. Silk is the chief material used, but of late years cotton has been much in demand. The art is handed down from family to family.

DAILY THOUGHTS.

Monday.—Speak properly, and in as few words as you can—but plainly; for the end of speech is not ostentation, but to be understood.

Tuesday.—It is better to say, "This one thing I do," than to say, "These forty things I dabble in."

Wednesday.—Do not diverted from your duty by any idle reflection the world may make upon you.

Thursday.—The worrying mood is an enemy to life.

Friday.—Think only what is right to do, and then do it.

Saturday.—Flowers are the beautiful hieroglyphics of Nature, with which she indicates how much 'she loves us.

Sunday.—Whenever thou seest corruption by thy side, and dost not strive against it, thou betrayest thy duty.

FROM THE PENCIL'S POINT.

If love is blind, how can there be love at first sight?

A woman has a lot of faith in her intuition—after a thing has come to pass.

Many a brave man who never faced a cannon braves his wife at breakfast every morning.

Value of Laughter.

If we realized the power of good cheer and the habit of laughter to retard the progress of age and to stay the hand which writes the wrinkles of care and anxiety on the face, we should have discovered the famed fountain of youth—the elixir of life.

REPUBLICANS TAKE NOTICE.

The Rock County Republican Club is organized to support the principles declared and the candidates nominated by Republican Conventions of Rock County, of the Assembly, Senatorial and Congressional Districts which include Rock County, of Wisconsin and of the Nation, and every voter in Rock County who believes in these principles and intends to vote for these candidates is welcomed to its membership.

It is the plan of this Club that its members shall constitute in each of the school districts, villages and city wards in Rock County, where they reside, an Auxiliary or Branch Club, with such local officers and committees as may be necessary to an efficient Republican campaign.

Believing in the principles and intending to vote for the candidates supported by the Rock County Republican Club, I hereby apply for membership therein.

WHAT ONE PARTY SAW AT THE FAIR

JANESVILLE LADY WRITES FROM ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION.

SIGHTS NEW AND STRANGE

First Impressions of the Great Show What To Do and See.

At the World's Fair, St. Louis, Sept. 21—I am glad I had my way. We talked it all over on the train while a Chinaman was climbing out of the upper berth in our section. We didn't know the Chinaman slept over us. That's one of the pleasant surprises of traveling, on one of these World's Fair sleeping cars. I wouldn't be surprised next time to wake up and find the foot of one of these ignorant docters from the Philippine village resting in my face. For it must be kept in mind that this is a World's fair—not a St. Louis fair—and you rub elbows with every race and nationality under the sun.

But, as I said before, I had my way, and that accounts for the fact that we circled around the great Exposition like a culture circles around his prey before alighting. John wanted to "wade" right into the exhibition as he expressed it, and Jane had her mind set on the lagoons. The gondollers, appealed to her romantic instinct. But my plan was to first take in the "high lights," to view the great exposition from lofty vantage-ground, marking the mountain tops of achievement and measuring its plan and scope.

So we took the Intramural railway at the main entrance and right glad we were that we had the forethought to take it. It is an ever-endless electric road, seven miles long, skirting the entire exhibition grounds, partly on the surface and partly on an elevated structure, following the topography of the great park in a way most delightful to the sight-seer. The World's fair of Chicago was built in a morass. The Louisiana-Purchase exposition has hills and natural forest to give a picturesque effect. The jutting prominences of these hills are crowned by stately palaces and beautiful pavilions, while two are connected by a semi-circular bridge leading to the lower level of the grounds, used to form the cascade gardens pronounced by many to be the greatest architectural water and garden composition ever executed by man. Nestling under the shade of great trees are state and foreign buildings representing varied types of ornate and stately architecture.

This was the picture presented to the eye as the trolley carried us swiftly along. The spectacle was beyond description. The sensation was unexplainable. We were viewing a fifty-million dollar show from the hill-tops of a 1250 acre forest, all for fifty cents, and as we went rushing along we tried to take in the panorama of sculptural and architectural splendor, but it was too much for the range of human vision.

The man with a megaphone "rattled" us of course and so we started on the Intramural the "wrong" way. We are not used to conversing by foghorn methods at home. But I have found that quite often the wrong way is the right way when it comes to seeing things, and so it proved in this case. We started at the last station instead of the first and no sooner had we started than the Plaza of St. Louis, the St. Louis monument, the Grand Basin, the Cascades crowned by Festival Hall and the Terrace of States burst into our view. From that time on there was a bewildering panorama of gardens, fountains, sculptural groups, terraces, exhibit palaces, state and foreign buildings. We passed also coal mining camps, zinc and lead mills, a Black Hills gold reduction plant, the great horticultural and agricultural palaces, a model poultry farm, the famous Ferris wheel the United States Life-Saving exhibit, the buildings of Brazil, East India and Canada. As we passed the bridge of Spain leading to the walled city of the Philippine reservation we heard the yells of the dog-dance in the Igorot village. On the right we heard the rapid pling-pling of rifles and the booming of cannon which told us that the battle of Modder river was in progress, in which the brave Boers were fighting under Cronje and Viljoen.

And we could go no further. Sniffing the smoke of battle and hearing the tom-toms in the nearby Philippine villages were too much.

"What shall we see first?" exclaimed Jane. "I vote for the Philippines said John with martial zeal and earnestness. And who had his way? We shall see."

BARN DESTROYED THIS MORNING

Barn Owned by Mr. Croft of New Glarus, Caught Fire from Gasoline Stove.

The barn owned by Mr. Croft of New Glarus, at the foot of South Main street, was damaged by fire this morning and a loss of about $200 to the building was sustained. About 9:30 o'clock an alarm of fire was pulled in from box 38, situated at the corner of South Main and Sharon streets, by William Farmer of the New Gas Light company who first discovered the barn in flames. The workmen employed by Contractor Kreuger were putting on a gravel roof on the building and were heating the cement in the barn on a gasoline stove when the flames burst out and in a few minutes the entire building was ablaze. The fire department arrived promptly and soon had two streams of water playing on the fire, confining it to the barn, though this was a difficult task as another building on an adjoining lot was only a few feet distant. The barn was being remodeled and it is estimated that the loss will be in the neighborhood of $200. The fire was struck out about twenty minutes after the department arrived.

SOCIAL UNION TO MEET IN NOVEMBER

DIGGING MACHINE SENT TO CHICAGO

Contractor Benson Sent Ditch Digger Back to Chicago Today.

Contractor Benson who has the contract for putting in the sewerage system in the city, shipped the digging machine which was brought from Chicago some weeks ago back to the city this morning. The machine does the best kind of work, but could not be used by the contractors to the best advantage along the business streets where so many gas and water service pipes are laid and it was thought best to ship the machine back to Chicago and do the most of the work by hand for the present.

The accident was caused by jumping into some cars while switching; near the St. Paul coal sheds about five-thirty last evening.

WHAT IS DOING UP IN THE STATE

STAFF CORRESPONDENT WRITES OF POLITICAL PROSPECTS.

IMPORANT DECISION COMING

South Dakota Supreme Court Has Decided Case Similar to the Present One Recently.

(By Staff Correspondent.)
Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 22.—I have just returned from Hudson where I had the great pleasure of hearing M. G. Jeffris deliver one of the finest campaign orations that I have heard in many a day. Jeffris is a forceful speaker and with a subject with which he is heart and soul interested in, he is a spell-binding beyond compare. Governor La Follette had been at Hudson the night before and stated as facts daring and almost unanswerable statements regarding the actions of the legislature of the past four years, who dared to vote against his command. Jeffris was at his best and before a large and enthusiastic audience he straightened out the tangled gubernatorial web for the reflection for many a day to come. It differed from his opening address in Milwaukee in many respects but was as forceful, full of facts and as well delivered as any he has ever delivered. Even the railroads have flocked to Senator Mosher's defense and in a signed statement they deny in toto the charges brought by the governor regarding rebate of railway rates to the concern controlled by Senator Mosher.

After Bancroft
I hear from Madison that Judge Bancroft, the member of the governor's political family who rode on a railway pass while his lord and master denounced the system, is being much criticised by La Follette leaders for having assisted in the defense of Henry Morrison who was recently convicted for life for murder. If the case is appealed to the supreme court, the attorney general's force must represent the state and the propriety of a member of that force participating in his private capacity, in a case that might later come before him in his official capacity, and on which he would be compelled to take the opposite side to that which he took in the lower court is creating considerable discussion. If Morrison had not been convicted, there would of course have been no possibility of the case going to the supreme court. Judge Bancroft's mistake, evidently was in not clearing Morrison.

A Similar Case
The supreme court of South Dakota decided a case exactly like that pending in Wisconsin between the republicans and the administration candidates. It was a county case. The regular convention was called; the opposition faction withdrew. In this case the so-called bolters were upheld by the court. The supreme court today settled the Robert county contest for place on the ballot of contesting tickets as republicans. The contest was between what is generally known as the Perkins and Eastman factions, both of which nominated full tickets as republicans. The auditor announced his intention of putting the Eastman ticket on as "regular," but the court holds the Perkins ticket to be regular, and shuts the others off the ticket, unless they are legitimated by petition.

FOOTBALL TEAM WAS ORGANIZED

Interurban Management To Have Football Games at Yost Park This Season.

Last evening at the meeting at the Hotel Myers a large number of football candidates turned out, and a team from here was selected and named. H. C. Kent, William Day, William Ryan, George Casey, Leonard Farley, Max Milthore, Charles Galbraith, Edward Horton, H. G. Jaekle, Leonard Matthews, Edwin Brown, C. W. Wilson, Richard McNell, Clarence Sutherland, Ralph Inman, Edward Jerg, Fred Hutchinson, James Joyce, and Ralph Bonestell, the management of the Beloit, Rockford & Janesville Interurban road are behind the plan and it is the intention to play a series of games at Yost park this season. The first game will be played about the first of October. A league will be formed and will include teams from Rockford, Beloit, Evansville, Madison, Fort Atkinson, Jefferson, Edgerton, Waukesha, and Stoughton.

WANT CANDIDATE FOR THE SENATE

DEMOCRATS ARE NOW LOOKING UP AVAILABLE MATERIAL.

BABBITT REFUSES THE HONOR

"Bob" Richmond of Evansville, Is Strongly Talked Of by His Friends.

Rock county democracy is now seeking a candidate for the state senate to oppose Senator Whitehead. Thus far all the available candidates have either refused to run, been nominated for some other office, or are considered as out of the question by the leaders of the "great unwashed." At the time of the county convention three men were seriously mentioned for the nomination, George Sutherland of Janesville, Clinton Babbitt of Beloit, and Andrew Jensen of Edgerton—one from each of the assembly districts. George McKee's name was mentioned but Mr. McKee promptly refused to be used in any connection.

Dropping Off
George Sutherland was the first to announce that he would not accept the nomination, owing to his business interests. He refused to be urged to sacrifice himself. Andrew Jensen was nominated for state treasurer by the democratic convention at Oshkosh and, of course, immediately became unavailable. This left Mr. Babbitt in the field, the lonely candidate.

Yesterday Mr. Babbitt is said to have officially declined to run. He is reported to have said that if he was twenty years younger he might undertake such a campaign as would be necessary to defeat Senator Whitehead, but that at the present time and under present conditions he could not see how a successful campaign could be conducted against the Janesville senator unless new ammunition was found other than has been used thus far.

Not Official
Members of the county committee say that they have no official word from Mr. Babbitt that he will not run beyond the newspaper reports and that until he sends final answer he is a candidate. Meanwhile a new dark horse has come into the arena—Robert Richmond of Evansville. Mr. Richmond is now the candidate for district attorney on the democratic ticket but it is stated by his friends he will resign this honor and become a candidate for the state senate.

Decided Saturday
This question will be decided next Saturday when the adjourned senatorial convention is to be held. In the evening the democrats will hold a love feast at the Myers house and welcome back the lost sheep who refused to follow Bryan in the ninety-six and nineteen hundred campaigns. It is expected faces will be seen around the democratic feasting board that have long been absent from party councils.

LITTLE FRANCE

A ROMANCE OF THE DAYS WHEN "THE GREAT LORD HAWKE" WAS KING OF THE SEA

BY CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY

Author of "Commodore Paul Jones," "Reuben James," "For the Freedom of the Sea," etc.

CHAPTER XXIX.

THE SINISTER EFFACEMENT OF A SHIP.

MEANWHILE, what of Grafton and the Torbay? He first engaged La Formidable and poured his broadsides into L'Heros and Le Magnifique, and had successfully hampered his way through the French rear until he brought his vessel alongside Le Thesee.

De Kersaint had well and worthily upheld his reputation as a skilled seaman and a great fighter upon that day, and all of the advancing British ships bore the marks of his prowess. It so happened that neither Le Thesee nor the Torbay had been materially injured in their previous fighting, and it also happened that the chance arrangements of the battle, which placed them side by side, left them to fight it out unhindered. Never were two ships more fairly and equally matched in size, gun power, crew and captain.

Grafton had no personal animosity toward De Kersaint. On the contrary, he had pursued him as a foeman entirely worthy of his steel. He knew the man, and that he would certainly be found in the thick of the action. He trusted to compel him to strike, in which case he could at once obtain possession of Anne—and that was the guiding hope of his heart. Other captains might be fighting for duty alone, or for the sheer love of the combat; he was swayed by all of these emotions, but he fought for love, too—for a woman, his wife!

He resolutely put out of his mind the peril she would be in. He had to do it. To dwell upon it would have unnerved him. Like most men of action, he was something of a fatalist, and he believed that Providence, which had brought about the present state of affairs, would inevitably bring them together again happily in the end. He knew that some one had to fire upon Le Thesee, and he preferred to do it himself. He reassured himself by thinking that Anne was stowed away safely in the chain-lockers—which was, true—and that her peril would not be great.

At any rate, he found himself at last alongside his desire, but to leeward, a fact which, though he deplored it at the time, afterward turned out fortunately for him. The leeward ship practically has to await the decision of the weather ship, which may attack at pleasure, hence the advantage of the windward position. The windward enemy may attack or wait, the leeward must wait or run.

De Kersaint had no idea of retreating, however. His national hatred of all Englishmen had at last got itself localized and was correspondingly deadly and bitter. He had learned—indeed, it had been impossible to conceal it from him—that his promised bride had been married to Capt. Grafton. He hoped and intended to kill the Englishman sometime, perhaps on that day of battle, and then marry the woman he loved, as if that previous marriage had never taken place. Her loss only intensified his love for her.

She did not love him, evidently; indeed, she made no secret of her love for her husband. What mattered it? The passion of the old makes up for intensity and persistence for the lost opportunities of youth. The follies of love—the greatest follies, that is, after all—are the follies not of youth, but of old age! He would have her, anyway, with or without her love, in the end. De Kersaint had surmised that Grafton would certainly be upon one of the ships of Hawke's fleet, though upon which one he could not, of course, determine.

The two ships were very close together before they engaged, each reserving his fire for a smashing blow, and the men on the poop-decks were already clearly visible to each other. Grafton could see the huge form of De Kersaint standing to leeward, looking at the Torbay as she came up. By his side stood the tall, thin form of the old marquis. Behind him rose the burly person of faithful Jean-Renaud.

They had embarked, as the marquis had declared, then. In order to get a better view of them Grafton sprang up on the rail, and, standing himself by the backstay, stared hard at the little group on Le Thesee. Where was his wife, he wondered, with a word of quick prayer. Anxiety unspeakable filled his soul.

At the same moment the Frenchmen recognized him. The marquis pointed him out to De Kersaint. The count flung his hand to Heaven in a gesture half of rapture, half of prayer, and shouted an order for Le Thesee to put up her helm and swing toward the Torbay. Joy was in the Breton's heart and savage determination. The opportunity he had prayed for was granted him.

"He's coming!" cried Grafton to the men of his staff, as he saw the movement. "To the batteries, gentlemen! Tell them to be ready—By Heaven, he's opening his main-deck ports in such a sea! We'll not be outdone by him. And his is the greater risk. Have our main batteries ready!"

He welcomed the attack with a fierce pleasure; the distraction of action alone saved him from breaking his heart. A short space of water and two wooden walls separated him from his wife—so little, yet the water was lashed into mad turbulence by the tempest, and the wooden walls were pierced by 100 guns ready to sweep him from the sea. Yet he would have her!

Both ships were, of course, heeled to the wind, but Le Thesee, being to windward, was forced to fight her lee battery; and the main-deck ports, as she lay over under the furious gale, were so close to the waves that the waters splashed and rippled over the port-sills with every roll. It was reckless trifling with the deadliest of perils, but that he could do so indicated the emotions animating the soul of the French captain. Grafton, being to leeward, fought his windward guns, and the inclination of the ship lifted his own main-deck battery a little farther above the water. Still, his own position was also dangerous in the extreme.

Hawke had opened his main-deck ports, but it was in the stiller waters of the bay that he had done so. Grafton and De Kersaint were yet off the Cardinals, the very roughest, stormiest position in the melee taking place all about them. Their action was mad; yet, if the Frenchman did it in his overwhelming desire to crush the man who had stolen his bride, and now rolled along under his lee, the Englishman could do no less than meet him.

Simultaneously the two broadsides roared out. Again and again, as the ships swept on, they poured a torrent of destruction upon each other from every gun that bore. The firing upon both sides was fast and furious, and the English, with the advantage of the weather battery, proved the better gunners. Many of the shot from the French ship struck the water and glanced over the English ship, but the steady broadside from the Torbay made deadly havoc on the magnificent French liner. Yet her offensive powers seemed undiminished, and she fought on. The Torbay, too, soon began to show evidences of the terrific pounding she was receiving. Both ships were filled with dead and wounded men and were much cut up along and aloft.

Grafton fought to win his wife, to serve his country, to avenge the shattering of the little Boxer five years before, and with no bitterness in his heart. De Kersaint fought not only for the honor of France, but with a jealous rage in his heart to kill the man who stood between him and his hopes. Neither would be denied. They drew nearer to each other. De Kersaint resolved to resort to a coup de main. Grafton also at last made up his mind that he would have to carry the opposing ship by boarding, which was quite in consonance with his desire. He had even gone so far as to call his boarders away, when a sudden squall struck the two ships. For the moment the wind blew a hurricane.

The two vessels heeled suddenly under the terrific impact, going over and over under the irresistible pressure until they lay almost upon their beam-ends. De Kersaint put the helm of Le Thesee hard down at once. But she did not respond. The water rushed in her open ports. She began to settle like a stone, righting slowly as she went down. The Torbay was scarcely in better condition. On the return roll to windward the water began to rush in her main-deck ports also.

"Close the main-deck ports!" shouted Grafton, as he saw the French ship going so fast, his first impulse being to save his own ship. "Lively, for God's sake!" The peril of the ship was reflected in his voice.

The men below sprang to the port-shutters, and in spite of the fact that the water was already sweeping in, by superhuman efforts they got them closed, but not until the ship had been half filled. She lay like a sudden log in the waves, six feet of water in the hold. The gun fire had ceased instantly.

Meantime, what of Le Thesee? Grafton stood in the darkening evening on the rail of his own ship and stared at his rival. She was sinking in silence. No human power could keep her afloat. Before his eyes the water was streaming through the open ports and gushing in through her riven sides. It had come so suddenly that there was scarcely time for those below to reach the spar-deck, which was yet swarming with men. Where was Anne? O God, was she below still?—abandoned! lost!

A little group still stood on the quarter-deck nearest him. There was De Kersaint, the bold captain; by his side a young man, his head bound about with a blood-spattered cloth, his arm hanging useless by his side. It was de Vitre. There was the marquis, too, tall, spare, imperturbable as ever. There was old Jean-Renaud staggering aft, and in his arms—God of Heaven, a woman! The faithful old Breton placed her on the rail and held her there erect. The stop of Grafton's heart told him who. Her black hair was blown away from her face by the force of the wind. She stood, without a cloak, in a white dress, like a bride of death. She recognized him, stretched out her hands toward him in love and appeal. It was his wife. There was nothing he could do. He was helpless. He could only look and look—he could not pray, even.

The French ship was lower now. Her decks were awash. Anne waved her hand to him in farewell. He cried out to her over the dark water. She could not hear. His wife! His wife! O God, his wife!

The old marquis laid his hand tenderly upon her shoulder, striving to calm her. De Vitre had fallen forward and lay motionless on the rail. Perhaps, happily, he was dead already. De Kersaint stood undaunted, with folded arms, looking at Le Thesee sinking before and with him. The habit of years had re-established itself. He was a sailor first of all now. He would go down with his ship with colors flying.

Old Jean-Renaud suddenly stepped upon the rail. He took Anne in his arms. What was he about to do? The marquis nodded his head, kissed his granddaughter's hand, and that faithful Breton leaped with her far out into the black waters. He would fight for her life. Her husband watched him strike boldly but with her, and then a wave rolled over them and they were gone from view. It had all transpired in a few moments.

"Starboard the helm!" shouted Grafton, awakening from his daze of agony. "Flow the head-sheets!" "My God, Capt. Grafton!" cried his first lieutenant, an old and experienced seaman, "what mean you to do?"

"Luff up toward yon ship!" "But, sir, we can't do it. Our vessel is full of water!" "Sir, sir," cried the master, "we'll sink in this wind! We must go off or lose the ship!"

"My God, sir, look at the French ship!" cried another man.

She had been settling evenly, but at last she went down with a mighty plunge. For a moment the sea was black with heads—men struck out frantically only to be sucked under in the mighty vortex that followed her disappearance. The last glimpse Grafton caught of the group on the poop-deck, de Kersaint still stood with folded arms looking forward. The marquis took off his hat and looked up toward the flag, "France! France!" he murmured. He made a fine end for a soldier. The English saw it fluttering on the surface of the water for a moment as the mighty spars sank slowly down, and then the waves washed over it. The ship was gone. Not a cheer was heard from the English decks; a groan of horror broke from her men, in fact, as they witnessed this sinister effacement of a ship.

Scarcely a minute had elapsed since the last broadside was fired, and now it was over. A few bits of wreckage, a few desperate men clinging to them, perhaps a score out of 800 gallant souls who had manned and fought her a moment since—that was all! Grafton gave one agonized glance aft. He thought in the darkness he could make out the forms of Jean-Renaud and his wife in the water drifting on. Another moment and they were lost to view.

"Have we a boat that will swim?" he cried in despair to the master. "Not one is left at the davits, sir," answered that officer, sadly.

"Breakers! Breakers ahead!" roared one of the officers forward.

They were right on the Cardinals. "Up with the helm! Hard up!" shouted Grafton, instinctively. But the sluggish ship steered slowly. For a few moments she held her way toward the rock. They thought she was doomed also. For himself Grafton did not care, but for his men! They waited in awful apprehension, but at last she slowly swung around and glided by, and peril was escaped. Right next to her was the French ship Le Juste, spitting fire and shot from her guns at the Torbay.

"We will attack that ship!" cried Grafton, recklessly turning the prow of his vessel toward her. "Fire on her. Let her have it, men!"

But there was no response to his command. His guns were silent. "Beg pardon, sir, the muzzles were flooded and all our powder was wetted when we came so near foundering," reported the gunner who had just come on deck.

"Ah, I had rather have gone down on the Cardinals than be thus helpless!" murmured the young commander, quite beside himself with the disappointments and anxieties of the hour.

"Sir, sir, some dry powder is found!" cried another, running up on the instant. "Engage! Engage, then!" screamed Grafton, fiercely. His mind was so overwhelmed by the catastrophe that he could find no relief save in action, and presently from the iron muzzles of his hot guns once more rang out the deadly discharge. A savage desire to slay, to kill, had supplanted every other emotion in Grafton's heart. He stood, wild-eyed and despairful, a madman on his own deck, inciting his men to action.

After half a dozen broadsides Le Juste, badly riven and shattered, sheered off and attempted to withdraw, having had enough of it. Grafton, however, was not to be shaken off.

He pursued the retreating French ship with implacable ferocity, working every gun that would bear upon her.

As the two ships swept along before the wind Grafton suddenly found himself mixed up with six other ships, one of which happened to be Le Tonnant, carrying de Beaufremont. Having had enough of the fight, the vice admiral—not greatly to his credit—had called these ships about him, and they were all endeavoring to escape to the southward through the narrow pass between Le Four bank and Pointe de Croisic on the shore. But the young Englishman's blood was up now, and he followed hard on their heels, and the singular spectacle of one water-logged and sodden ship pursuing six ships of the enemy was presented. In their wild haste to get away the French neglected the opportunity afforded to capture him.

As they swept around Le Four and headed for the south, Grafton, who was ignorant of these waters, as were all the English captains, headed straight for them, firing on them with his chase guns at the same time, the French making but a feeble reply. He had gone only a few cables' length, however, when, without any warning, in the darkness his ship took ground. She struck with tremendous force upon the rocky shoal of Le Four, and each succeeding wave lifted her higher and higher and hurled her farther upon the shore. The light spars snapped like pipe-stems at the first blow, and as the ship pounded upon the reef, mast after mast went, until she lay grinding on the sands a total wreck, the waves breaking over her and sweeping her from stern to stem.

The last shot from Le Juste struck the Torbay on the quarter, just as she hit the reef. It sent a shower of splinters inboard, one of which struck Grafton in the breast and buried him over the rail to windward. He caught feebly at a backstay, shouted a command, and the next moment a falling spar dashed him into the sea.

For him aid for all the rest the battle was over.

PEOPLE WE KNOW.

They Are Janeville People, and What They Say Is of Local Interest.

When an incident like the following occurs right here at home, it is bound to carry weight with our readers. So many strange occurrences go the rounds of the press; are published as facts, people become skeptical. On one subject skepticism is rapidly disappearing. This is due to the actual experience of our citizens, and their public utterances regarding them. The public statement of a reputable citizen living right here at home, one whom you can see every day, leaves no ground for the skeptic to stand on.

Mrs. S. L. Belden of 64 S. River street says: "During two or three years I suffered most of the time with a terrible dragging down pain in my back just over the kidneys. It was very trying when I was at work and if I did any lifting my bladder became affected causing me considerable annoyance. I also had attacks of headache which seemed like congestion in the top and back of my head. When I got about Doan's Kidney Pills I did not have any too much confidence in them, but my daughter got a box at the People's Drug Co.'s store and persuaded me to use them. They took right hold and made a wonderful change in my condition. I hardly realized how bad I was until Doan's Kidney Pills brought me relief from the afflictions."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50 cents. Foster-McBirn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for U. S.; also on sale at King's Pharmacy. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no other.

TYPICAL COSTUME OF 1830.

Gown Shows Many of the Absurd Caprices of Fashion. It is rather difficult to give an accurate idea of a gown of any definite period on account of the various changes constantly occurring. Yet we may safely state that the typical 1830 costume was "either high or low, with or without capes; long sleeves with wristbands, or short sleeves and long gloves; bodice with or without a waistband and generally worn with an embroidered collar; scarf and parasol of some dark tint; black prunella or Turkish satin shoes; no trimmings to the gown, but red or flames colored ribbon bows scattered here and there and necklaces composed of two rows of pearls."

Of course, caprice had its full sway. The leg of mutton sleeve, which first appeared in 1820 and attained by degrees enormous proportions, and the no less absurd heret, imbecile and elephant sleeves were supplanted by others not quite so eccentric, but still for the most part sufficiently extraordinary.

Strange Cat and Dog Friendship.
Until recently Mrs. Annie M. Pringle of New Ipswich, N. H., had two pets, a pug dog and a cat. The dog had become so old that she seldom left the house. Each morning the cat would go out and not return until he had caught a squirrel, a rabbit or a field rat for the dog's breakfast. The offering he laid at the dog's feet, and his own breakfast was neglected until after the dog had finished.

LITTLE DANGER OF FROSTS NOW

Only Late Corn Can Now Be Seriously Hurt—Most of Tobacco in Sheds.

Farmers around Janesville say there was practically no frost last night and as there is a south wind today they don't expect any tonight. "Practically everything is now beyond the reach of frost," said a Milton farmer. "except the late corn. A week or ten days more of fine weather is needed for that. Farmers are now just beginning to cut the corn. The early planted is an excellent crop and the late promises to fill well."

An orchard of pumpkins was in town with a load of pumpkins, Hubbard squash and rutabagas. "We have a fine yield of everything this year—corn, tobacco, potatoes and all. We are through threshing. Our oats averaged 35 bushels an acre and were heavy. We have had 45 bushels an acre but they have been lighter than this year. Tobacco is fine except the late planted. Practically all is in the shed. It will be much better than last year and many farmers sold their crop right in the field at 8 and 8½ cents. Last year the farmers closed their sheds too much and there was considerable shelling. They are looking out this year. I have four acres which I plant as much as the ordinary farmer can take care of, unless he has lots of help, and help is hard to get this year. Garden truck is an excellent yield and the fruit, wild and tame, is heavy this year. Nearly all the garden truck has now been brought under cover. There is lots of fall feed also owing to the recent rains and altogether the farmers are in a happy frame of mind."

"We had frost last night. A week ago we had a narrow escape and some corn in the lowlands was nipped. The heavy dew saved us that night. By the time the dew was frozen through the sun was up and saved the day for us. Ice formed on the corn leaves that night."

He is an up-to-date farmer. Instead of sowing turnips and rutabagas broadcast he follows the old country practice of planting them in rows, thinning them out and cultivating them. In this way he gets a big yield.

Squash and pumpkins are cheap in the market now, going for from 5 to 10 cents each.

BIG ATTENDANCE AT UNIVERSITY

Chadbourne Hall Will Be Filled to Overflowing with Tenants This Year.

(Special To The Gazette.) Madison, Wis., Sept. 22.—It is evident, even to the casual observer that the opening of the university is approaching. Students from various parts of the country are arriving in the city in increasing numbers each day. Many of these are looking for boarding places and work which will enable them to go through the university. It is expected that when the registrar's office opens next Wednesday a record breaking throng will be there, ready to enroll. Indications are that the University of Wisconsin will have the largest enrollment in its history this year, probably some 3,500. The number of graduates from accredited high schools is unusually large. Some principals report that as much as 25 per cent of last June's graduates will come to Madison.

Every room in Chadbourne hall, the young women's dormitory, had been engaged a month ago. Some of the larger rooms which were occupied by two during previous years will this year accommodate three each.

PARTY OF WHITE MEN DESTROYS NEGRO'S EYES

Force Victim to Enter a Hack, Where One of the Men Uses His Revolver.

Talbotton, Ga., Sept. 22.—The negroes recently disgraced by the court here on the charge of belonging to a "Before Day club" were followed on their departure by a hack carrying four or five white men. About a mile from town the hack party met a negro boy named Jack Troy. In passing someone in the hack shot him, wounding him so seriously that he is not expected to live.

Six miles from town the hack party called Ed Martin, a negro on H. C. Trusler's plantation, from his house and made him get in the hack, where one of the party shot the negro's eye out and he is not expected to live. These negroes were not charged with being members of the "Before Day club."

Sheriff Richard, with deputies and a posse, have gone to Prattburg to protect the negroes there.

Up Newport way Henry Clews gets credit for this one, apropos of a meeting of a chapter of the Sons of the Mayflower or Descendants of Dutch Dignitaries or something of that sort. "It's a mighty good thing to have descended from some of these famous people," said Mr. Clews to his companion in The Reading Room.

"Yes," gives 'em a sort of social patted they might otherwise have missed."

"But that wasn't exactly what I meant," responded Mr. Clews.

"What then?"

"Because they've such good constitutions. Descendants of the common people of those days seem to have all died out, you know."—New York Times.

Catch Words or Phrases. If you desire to get rich quickly, invent catch-words or phrases that will grip the attention of the public. Big sums are paid for the right article. The inventor of a word now used for a brand of crackers is said to have received $5,000 for it. Manufacturers of various things from soap to nuts have paid nearly as high. A railroad company gave $100 to a girl who suggested a name for one of its fast trains.

Not Good in Connecticut. "My friend, there was a man down in Tennessee who made an enormous fortune by minding his own business," quietly remarked Mayor John P. Stedley of New Haven, Conn., as he sat on the porch of the Monteville house the other day. The object to whom the remark was made had been a trifle too insistent about some investigations into the affairs of the New Haven police department, and the mayor didn't just like it.

"Your friend was in luck to have lived in Tennessee," returned The Object. "Had he lived in Connecticut he would have starved to death by pursuing that plan."

The Object had been at the corner grocery stores in and about Branford when the tongues of the cracker barrel gossips were wagging at their liveliest.—New York Times.

German Steel Syndicate.

In February last the German steel syndicate was formed. It embraces twenty-seven out of the aggregate twenty-nine German steel-works, only two—the Phoenix and the Bochum Verein—holding aloof. The immediate effect of this coalition will be the uniform regulation of the preponderance of the steel production of Germany in a manner similar to that which has obtained for some time in the Rhinish coal industry through the Westphalian coal syndicate.

Festivities for Prince Henry.

The prospective visit of Prince Henry of Prussia will furnish occasion for several high social events at Newport. He will travel as a private citizen, but the Vanderbilts and the Goellets will take occasion to return many of the courtesies shown them by his highness' brother, the kaiser. Apropos the emperor's new Herreshoff yacht will be built at Bristol this winter.

Cortelyou's Progress.

George B. Cortelyou, after completing a law course in Columbia University, taught school in New York, chiefly in college preparatory institutions. He then learned shorthand and became instructor in a shorthand college. His first post was private secretary to the appraiser of the port of New York.

Slang Tabooed.

Clara—Our club bars out gum-chewing and slang. Bertha—It does? Clara—Yes; women who chew gum and talk slang oughtn't to cut any ice in a literary club.

Improving Gradually.

"Your wife is improving with her baking, isn't she?" "Oh, yes." "Her cakes and pies now are good enough to eat, eh?"

GREAT SYSTEM OF TROLLEYS

Survey is Begun on Links to Connect Benton, Mich., and Cincinnati.

La Porte, Ind., Sept. 22.—Surveyors have begun work on an electric railway which is to complete a chain of electric lines from Benton Harbor, Mich., to Cincinnati. Considerable of the right-of-way has been purchased for this system, part of which is in operation. The plan of the projectors of the numerous systems in operation in northern Indiana is to make South Bend the great radiating point for Chicago and to points in Michigan.

Messengers Tie Up Service.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 22.—The local service of the Western Union is practically paralyzed by the strike of the messenger boys.

Rose Defies Jeff.

Young College Athlete Says He Can Whip Champion Heavyweight.

Wonders will never cease. Champion Jim Jeffries has been challenged to a fight for the world's heavyweight title by young Ralph Rose, the "boy wonder" of the University of Michigan. The champion says he is willing to take on Rose or any one else, and a "who nuff" battle may result.

Rose is a giant. He is not yet out of his teens. He is one of the most versatile and most talked about athletes in America. In a letter to a friend Rose declares that he believes he is the only man who is able to whip Jeffries. Except for a few amateur bouts in his younger days at his home in California Rose is unknown in the boxing game. But his prowess as an athlete has gone the rounds of the world. He is the greatest shot putter and hammer thrower in the country, and it is said that in a practice throw, which does not stand at a record, he has thrown the hammer a trifle over 190 feet. He holds the world's record for the shot put.

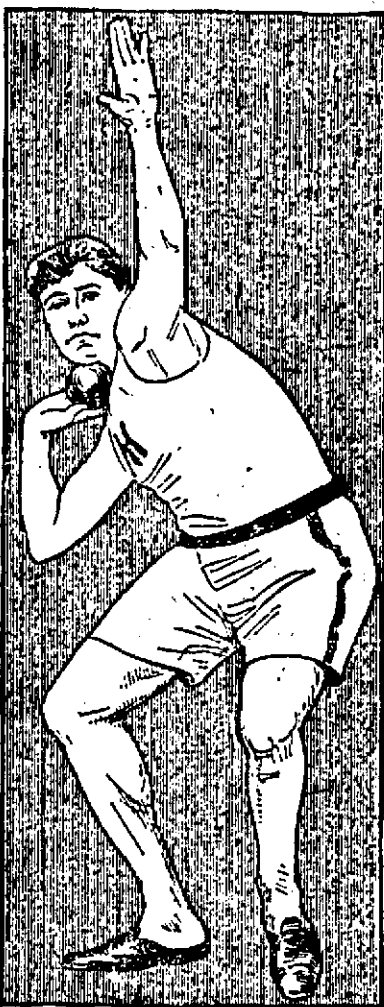

He has the physical proportions of a giant. He is eighteen years old, stands six feet seven inches in his stockings and weighs 275 pounds. His strength is prodigious, and when hurling the hammer or putting the shot he shows little exertion and with ease excels the best marks ever made with these athletic instruments.

He is full of superfluous energy, and he feels that the only way he can put it to advantage is to thoroughly thrash Champion Jeffries. He confidently believes that he can do it and without any trouble.

Athletic trainers who have put him in condition for field and track events say that he is a marvel of shiftness and can move like a panther despite his great bulk.

Rose said in his letter that he could strike a harder blow than Jeffries. He claims to have a stronger right arm and says his endurance is greater than that of Jeffries.

Rose does not intend to follow the fighting game as a business, but declares that he has heard so much of Jeffries being invincible that he would just like to disprove that contention.

In a battle with Jeffries, Rose would have the advantages of Jeff in every way other than experience in the ring. He is a younger man by nine years, is taller by six inches, weighs nearly fifty pounds more than the champion, and it is claimed for him that in physical strength he has almost double the power of the champion.

As a fighter Rose has never been considered. What prompted the brazen challenge to Jeff is still a mystery to Rose's friends other than the facts given out in his letter.

The giant acknowledges gracefully that he believes Jeff at this time has the advantage of him in the matter of ring experience, but says with the aid of an experienced trainer he would be able to meet Jeff on his own level as a pugilist.

VANDERBILT RACE.

Long Contest For Valuable Cup Occurs Oct. 8.

The board of supervisors of Nassau county, N. Y., held a special meeting at Mineola recently and granted formal permission to the Automobile Association of America to hold the race for the William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., cup over a course in Nassau county. The race will be held on Oct. 8.

The course is about thirty-two and a half miles long, and the distance to be covered by the machines is about 300. There will be about a dozen competitors. The start is to be made near the pumping station on the Jericho road, and the course will lead the machines through the Long Island towns of Westbury, Queens, Jericho, Hicksville and Hempstead.

Alexander Gullmant, greatest living organist of France, who will give a number of recitals in the United States, likes America, but frowns upon ragtime.

PARKER TALKS TO HIS COMMITTEE

Arrives in New York to Consult on the Situation in the West.

[Special by Scripps-McIntee.] New York, Sept. 22.—Parker arrived here at the Hoffman house at one o'clock this morning. He came to hold conferences with personal and political friends. He will return to Europe tomorrow evening. Among the early callers were John B. Stanchfield of Elmira, and Perry Belmont.

BELIEVES WRECKERS INTENDED ROBBERY

Illinois Central Official Thinks Thieves Caused Train to Leave Tracks at Barclay, Ill.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 22.—Some malicious person or persons threw a switch and wrecked the Diamond Special passenger train, en route from Chicago to St. Louis, at Barclay, fifteen miles north of this city.

The switch was thrown and twelve coaches left the track. Fireman Concanon was killed and Walter Hayes of Clinton, engineer, received a broken leg. Only one passenger was injured.

Inspection showed that the switch had been partly opened and an obstruction placed so that the switch could not be moved. The light was out, and the lock was found in an adjoining field. The switch was in perfect order less than an hour previous.

An official of the road, seen soon after the accident, is convinced that the work was the result of a deliberately planned effort by would-be train robbers. He said:

"We believe that robbery was the object of the wreckers. They evidently believed that the entire train would be overturned and they would have an opportunity to get in their work. We know of no reason any one would have to commit such an act from motives of revenge."

BUILDS HUGE MACHINE TO TRAVEL THROUGH AIR

Canadian Professor Believes That He Has Discovered the Principle of Successful Aerial Navigation.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 22.—Prof. D'Aimola is confident he has discovered the principle of successful aerial navigation. He has made a partially successful test with his machine, which is built after the fashion of a huge bird and weighs 100 pounds. The wings are of stiff canvas and the frame work of the machine is of bamboo. The wings are worked by hand pedals and the operator sits on a seat in the center of the machine.

The wings and tail of the bird were fixed rigidly in a horizontal plane. At a given signal four men hurled the machine with the professor upon it into the air and though a comparatively short distance was traveled it was amply sufficient to show the wings possess the required rigidity and supporting area.

Another experiment was tried with the wings free. The action of the machine depends upon the weight it carries, dropping in the middle, and raising the ends of the wings.

FUMES OF ACID PROVE FATAL

Two Denver Firemen Dead and Others Seriously Injured.

Denver, Sept. 22.—Lieut. Charles Doloff and Truckman John McGladie are dead and two other firemen are in a precarious condition from inhaling fumes of nitro acid, a carboy of which was burst by a bolt of lightning which started a fire in the etching rooms of the Post Printing and Publishing company. Truckman Sherman B. Wilcox has double pneumonia and is in a serious condition. Capt. Charles Eymann is seriously ill. Nine other firemen are also suffering from the effects of the fumes. They are Acting Chief John Dulmage, Lieut. Vincent Davidson, Truckman Edward Hollingsworth, Frank P. Lunt and William Alward, Pipemen John Ryan, Emil Norrillo and William H. Granger and Driver William Lewis.

BELIEVE WOMEN WERE SLAIN

Man's Necktie Clew in Death of Kaher Sisters in Ohio.

Bucyrus, Ohio, Sept. 22.—Citizens of New Winchester, near here, are investigating the deaths of Misses Mary and Lizzie Kaher, who were found dead on the Ohio Central railroad tracks. They were supposed to have committed suicide, but investigation shows no wounds on the body of Mary Kaher and no injuries were found on the body of the other woman, except that her legs had been cut off. It is now believed they were murdered and their bodies placed on the track, as their breakfast was found prepared in their farmhouse and a man's necktie was found on the track near where the bodies were discovered.

STATE SUES THE STANDARD OIL

Tennessee Accuses Great Company of Bribery to Hold Trade.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 22.—The state of Tennessee has brought suit at Gallatin against the Standard Oil company on the charge of violating the anti-trust law passed by the last legislature. The specific charge is that the company has bribed parties to countermand orders to a rival concern, one witness testifying that the Standard gave him 100 gallons of oil to countermand an order so given. The case is attracting much attention and some of the ablest lawyers in the state are present.

DOGS IN THE MAIL

Experiment in Pneumatic Tube Did No Harm.

The London Daily Mail says that taking the squirming little dog firmly but gently with the left hand, the operator dropped him carefully into the yawning mouth of the big cylinder. Then, closing the breech of the case with a dexterous movement of his right hand, he pushed the cylinder into the machine. A touch of a lever, and tube and dog disappeared from view.

This reads like some dreadful act of cruelty calling for the intervention of the S. P. C. A., but as a matter of fact it was one of the many interesting experiments made yesterday at the first demonstration of the pneumatic tube system at Ranelagh Lodge, Fulham.

In exactly 25 seconds the cylinder and dog were blown out of the returning tube, having traveled in that period 800 feet. On his release it may be recorded that the little dog wagged his tail and evinced those signs of canine satisfaction which humanity usually associates with a contented mind.

Gradle Vibrator.

With the idea of providing for the tired and worn occupant of the cradle the means of easily courting our dear old friend Morpheus, and enjoying restful slumber when once the tiny eyes have closed in sleep, there has been invented an extremely novel attachment for cradles which has added to its many virtues the fact that it will allow the mother to devote her time to other things while her little one is asleep.

The thing is very simple and consists only of an electric or water motor whose mechanism regularly and gently vibrates the mattress of the cradle. All that is necessary is to put baby in the cradle, turn on the current and the tired little brat will soon be in a deep and peaceful slumber.

Child of Many Nations.

When Camillo di Righini, the charming child of Mme. Ella Russell, was born, his parents were in great doubt as to his nationality, for he was born two days out from New York, on the Konigsm Louise, under the German flag. His mother is an American; his father, Count di Righini, a pure Italian. On the father's side Mme. Ella Russell's grandmother was Welsh and her maternal grandmother Austrian. To add to these complications, Camillo's birth was registered, according to law, at the first port of call, which happened to be Cherbourg, France. What was the nationality of this little Italian - American - Scotch - Welsh - Austrian - German - French - English infant? This profound problem for a long time perplexed all Mme. Russell's friends and acquaintances, until the singer at last had the good fortune to consult T. P. O'Connor, who without a moment's hesitation pronounced the verdict, "Why, av course, he's a son of old Ireland."

Dog's Auto Togs.

The motor dog is here as a recognized part of modern life. First it was the coach dog, but, forsooth, he is relegated to the rear, and now the motor dog has taken his place. In Paris and London they make a specialty of novelties for the motor dog, including goggles, face shield and cap and coat, and he does not look a bit more unlovely than the human beings he accompanies. It is not all fun for the dog, because the unusual gear gives him much annoyance, especially the goggles, which irritate his nose. Some fastidious dogs, however, wear veils, but this article will not become popular in the real canine snob set because its indiscriminate use by both sexes is considered in questionable taste.

Daughter Married by Mother.

A very odd wedding occurred recently at the residence of the Rev. Mary T. Whitney, in Boston, Mass. The groom was the Rev. Carl G. Horst, the pastor of the Second Unitarian church of Athol, Mass.; the bride was Miss Emily Aitken, of Boston, and the officiating minister was the Rev. Martha C. Aitken, mother of the bride. Cases where a father marries his daughter are not infrequent, but this is, perhaps, the only instance on record where a mother has married her daughter.

YACHT COST HIM NOTHING.

How Commodore Monroe Was Made Eligible for Position.

Just what the Larchmont Yacht club will do, now that Gus Monroe is dead, the members are wondering. With Mr. Monroe the Larchmont Yacht club was a hobby. He worked harder to make that organization succeed than many men work at their business. He was identified with the club for more than twenty years, and all that time he was an officer.

In 1883 he was chosen commodore. He did not own a yacht then.

"Bill," he said to his friend, W. S. Alley, "they want me to be commodore, but I can't be, because I haven't a boat."

"Is that all that prevents you from accepting the nomination?" asked Mr. Alley.

"That's all," was the reply. "Then I'll give you my yacht, the Schermer. I'll have the boat properly transferred to you in consideration of $1. You can keep her as long as you like, but when you want to get rid of her you must give me the opportunity to take her back again for $1."

"That's a go," said the commodore. The Schermer, which was the most famous sloop in her day, was duly transferred, and Mr. Monroe paid Mr. Alley $1.

"Now, I'll match you for the dollar," said the commodore.

They matched, and Mr. Alley lost, so the commodore got his flagship for nothing.

He kept the Schermer for two years, retired from office, and then had the yacht transferred back to Mr. Alley. When Mr. Alley paid the dollar he suggested that they should match for it. "Not on your life," said Commodore Monroe. "That dollar is going to be a souvenir of the flagship I owned that never cost a cent."—New York Sun.

To Make a Compass of Your Watch.

Get the number of hours from midnight, divide by two and point the hour at the sun so that the shadow of a match or lead pencil falls directly across the center of the watch; 12 o'clock will be north, 6 south, 9 west and 3 east. Suppose it is 9 a. m.; number of hours from midnight is 9; one half is 4½; point 4:30 at the sun so the shadow of a match or lead pencil falls across the center of watch, and 12 is north, 6 south, 3 east and 9 west. Suppose it is 6 p. m.; number of hours from midnight, 18; one half, 9; point 9 at sun and 12 is north, 6 south, 3 east and 9 west.

Also, when the sun is hidden on a cloudy day, take a lead pencil or stick that is well sharpened and place it on the thumb nail. By looking closely you will see a faint shadow, which will give you a very good idea of the direction of the sun, and may be useful to one lost on a cloudy day.—Forest and Stream.
